2 YR. CHILD FALLS FROM WINDOW TO SIDEWALK

Drops 30 Feet to Street While Reaching for Toy Rattle.

SKULL IS FRACTURED

William Richards, 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Richards, is not expected to live as the result of a fall from the third-story window of the Brockerhoff block on Tuesday evening to the sidewalk on Bishop St. The child fell approximately 30 feet. Physicians say they do not expect its recovery.

The parents were in another room at the time of the accident and the four children were alone in the front room of the apertment. According to the rather confused stories of the other children, William climbed to the window sill by the aid of an arm chair nearby, in an effort to secure a baby's rattle. In some unknown manner he became unbalanced and fell against the screen which failed to hold up under the impact of the blow. Elmer Eby, an employe of John Rossman, was sitting on the steps in front of the latter's store, almost underneath the window from which the little tot fell, and picked him up. The child's father arrived on the scene about that time and carried him to the office of a local physician, who immediately rushed him to the hospital. An examination disclosed a fractured skull, right ankle broken, and a number of more or less serious contusions. Physicians who operated on the child on Wednesday morning were astounded at its amazing vitality.

Mrs. McMinn Celebrates Birthday.

Mrs. Nancy J. McMinn, of Curtin, on Wednesday of this week celebrated the occasion of her 95th birthday. The entire Curtin family, including Mrs. Harry Curtin, Mrs. McMinn's only living child, and all of Mrs. Curtin's children but one, J. Mac., of Pittsburgh; namely: Mrs. John Curtin, Mr. and Mrs. Laird Curtin and Mr. and Mrs. Catherine Hodges, as well as 15 great grandchildren, celebrated the occasion by attending the chicken and waffle dinner at the Unionville Tea Room. Needless to say, everybody, including Mrs. McMinn, had a perfectly gorgeous time.

R. N. Vaningen Ill.

R. N. VanIngen, well known auto dealer, was taken seriously ill at his home on North Allegheny Street last Sunday due to an over-dose of a sleeping potion. He was removed to the local hospital where he has since regained consciousness. Mr. VanIngen has not been well for some weeks, suffering from inability to sleep. He was in the habit of taking medicine to induce sleep, and it is supposed took an unusually large dose, which caused him to collapse. His condition was greatly improved this morning.

18TH POORMAN REUNION

Delightful Gathering of Family and Friends in Fisher Grove.

Notwithstanding the threatening weather of the morning a crowd of about three hundred of the Poorman families gathered in the Edgar Fisher Grove, about a mile and a half east of Milesburg, on last Saturday to renew acquaintances, and have a general good time.

At about eleven thirty Mr. E. R. Hancock of Philipsburg called the company together around the tables laden with the best things to eat, and after the singing of the Doxology, and prayer by C. C. Shuey, of Bellefonte, they all sat down and enjoyed the splendid dinner gotten up by the entire relationship.

After partaking of refreshments, the business of the association was transacted and a regular program carried out, consisting of singing by a quartet composed of E. R. Hancock, Mrs. Sharp, wife of the pastor of the U. B. Church of Philipsburg; Miss Helen Hancock, Dean Hancock, all of Philipsburg, also solos and duets by Mrs. Sharp and Miss Margaret Sharp. Addresses were made by C. C. Shuey, Rev. Mr. Rowe, of Runville, and Rev. Mr. Sharp, after which most of the party left for home, some eating supper before leaving. Every one present enjoyed the occasion to the very fullest, leaving with best wishes for the success of all, and hope that all may be spared to meet again a year hence.

The only sad part was the memorials read of some half dozen who had been transported to the other world since the reading of the last memorials.

WILLIAMS REUNION

Large Crowd Present at Annual Gathering Near Martha.

The twenty-fourth annual reunion and picnic of the Williams family is an enjoyable affair of the past, having taken place last Saturday at the place of its birth, the Miles grove, near Martha.

Notwithstanding the downpour of rain on Friday night, members of the connection came pouring in from all parts of the state. Representatives were present from Pittsburgh, Portage, Reynoldsville, Chester, and in fact from nearly every county, arriving during the morning by automobile and train, until it was estimated that between three and four thousand persons had gathered in the beautiful grove. Attention was called during the progress of the excellent dinner which was served that at one table there were no less than four generations represented, headed by the venerable W. S. Williams, who is in his 83rd. year, and who is the founder of the annual reunion of the family.

Midway attractions were numerous and furnished amusement during the day for those who did not care for baseball or quoits. Two excellent baseball games were played between Port Matilda and Julian. An excellent band furnished music throughout the day and several prominent men addressed the gathering, which was voted "the best ever."

MOTOR LIGHTING LAW IS EFFECTIVE SEPT. 1

Every Automobile Owner Should Have His Lens Tested.

NO EXCUSES ACCEPTED

The new automobile lighting law, for all cars in Pennsylvania, will go into effect on Monday, September 1. Every motorist should take care that his lights are perfectly adjusted and that he has a set of the legal lens, a list of which is given below.

As far as can be learned at this time the law is as follows: A 21 candle power, gas gass filled bulb, is the maximum light unit which is permitted. Bulbs should be adjusted and focused in the lamp so that the most direct ray of light is produced. The lamp itself should be adjusted so that the direct rays strike the road not more than 42 feet ahead of the car. The rays should also be directed straight ahead so that none of the direct rays strike a car coming in the opposite direction. Most garages are equipped to focus lights properly and no time should be lost in having the lights properly adjusted.

The list of lens which have proved acceptable to the State Highway Commission is as follows: Alpheco, Bausch and Lomb, Benzer, Type A., Brown Reflector, Conaphore Clear, Type F., Deglarascope, Dillon, Type L., Conaphore Noviol, Dodge Bro., 8 1-8 only, Types D and B, Elite Head Lamp, Flatlite Standard Reflector, Flintex, Ford, 8 1 8 only, Type H, Guide Ray Headlamp, Type A, Holophane, Model 855, Hudson, 8 1 8 only, Johnson, Lee Knight, Legalite, M-111, Liberty, Type D., Macbeth, Type D, McKeelite, Mirro-Tilt, Monogram, Osgood, Model B-23, Pearh-O-Lite, Type FW., Patterson, Spread-Lite, and Smith Standard.

A fine of not less than $10 nor more than $25, plus the costs, will be imposed upon any person operating a motor vehicle with lamps not properly adjusted. The State motor patrol have been instructed to bend every effort toward suppressing illegal head lamps after September 1, so that motorists are warned that only a few days remain in which to have the necessary changes made in their lights.

NEW MOTEL AT WOODWARD

Old Grist Mill to be Turned into Elaborate Summer Resort.

J. W. Hosterman, of Buffalo, N. Y., formerly of Woodward, bought the old Motz grist mill at Woodward last week and will begin to remodel it for a hotel immediately. The old dam, which has fallen into a deplorable state of repair, will be rebuilt for swimming and boating.

Mr. Hosterman stated that woodward is becoming quite famous as a delightful place to spend a summer vacation. In fact it has become so popular that the old Woodward hotel is much too small to accommodate the large number of people principally tourists who flock there during the summer months. He also states that no expense will be spared to remodel the old mill into an up-to-date summer resort. Fish of all kinds, as well as some of the most beautiful mountain scenery in the state, abound in that district.

Convict Got Lost.

Quite a lot of excitement was occasioned at the Rockview penitentiary last Thursday evening when John Meyers, serving a 1 to 2 year sentence received from Mifflin County, failed to show up at the nightly roll call. However, a telephone call was received from the man himself early Friday morning, to the effect that he was in State College, and he had merely become lost the night before and was not trying to escape. Prison officers immediately went to State College and brought him back to the prison. Prison officials decided, however, that men who so easily become "lost" had no business in a large place like Rockview, so they returned him to Pittsburgh the next day.

Odd Fellows Picnic.

The Odd Fellows and Rebekahs of Centre and Clinton counties will unite in a large picnic at Hecla Park on Labor Day. All the lodges in the two counties will join in the celebration. About 40 lodges and a corresponding number of auxiliaries will be there. One of the chief attractions on the program will be a drill by the degree team of the Lock Haven Rebekahs. There will be dancing by the Lyric Orchestra in the afternoon and evening as well as a snappy baseball game between the Lock Haven Eagles and the Bellefonte team.

MANY AUTO ACCIDENTS BUT FEW PERSONS HURT

Collisions and All Kinds of Mix-ups Figure in Reports.

FORGET "SAFETY FIRST"

Robert Walker, 19 years old, who resides with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Myers at Flemington, met with a serious automobile accident at Hublersburg Friday evening at 8 o'clock, whereby his upper jaw was badly fractured in three places, and his right hand was lacerated. Several companions in the automobile escaped with slight bruises. The car, a Buick six, 1923 model, was damaged to a considerable extent.

Walker was driving through the main street at Hublersburg, when an automobile driven by a man named Decker ran out an alley and crashed into the Buick.

First aid was rendered the injured young man by Miss Faye Rote, community nurse of Lock Haven, who was traveling just back of the Walker car at the time. Later he was conveyed to Lock Haven by a passing motorist and taken to the office of a physician who attended to the injuries, which required several stitches inside the mouth in addition to setting the fractured bones. One small piece of broken jaw bone was removed entirely.

A Chevrolet sedan owned by William Reed, of Bellefonte, was wrecked at the intersection of Wilson and Bishop streets when a Columbia sedan, headed toward Lock Haven, crashed into the rear of the Reed car just as it turned to the left out of Wilson street. The Chevrolet was knocked across the road into the Ford roadster of William Kline, which was parked in front of the Kline home. The Chevrolet was the worst damaged of the three. One wheel was broken off, the gasolene tank was torn from its fastenings, and both rear fenders were damaged considerably. The left rear tire on the Kline car was blown out by the impact of the collision. The Columbia is owned in Mill Hall, and was not damaged to any extent. No injuries were sustained by any of the occupants.

Ralph Kirk and wife, two children and his two sisters, the Misses Lorraine and Elilabeth Kirk, of Tars, near Pittsburgh, all sustained minor injuries last Thursday when the Buick car in which they were riding, struck a concrete culvert near Sandy Ridge and overturned. The Kirks have been visiting near Kylertown and had been in Bellefonte for a few days as guests at the home of Mrs. Kirk's mother, Mrs. D. I. Willard, and were returning to Kylertown when the accident occurred. The injured were taken to the McGirk sanitarium at Philipsburg, where it was discovered that the 3-months-old baby had sustained a dislocated shoulder, Mrs. Kirk a sprained wrist and their other child slight injuries to her nose. The party has since returned to Bellefonte.

What might have been a more serious accident was one which occurred at the corner of Bishop and Spring street on Sunday afternoon, when a Grant Six collided with a Dodge touring car. The former car was driven by a Mr. Lyons, who resides along the Jacksonville road. He was coming down the hill with the intention of continuing north on Spring street. The other car, occupied by Mrs. Joseph Runkle and her son, made a left turn from Bishop into Spring just as the Grant came to the intersection of the streets, with the result that the Grant crashed head-on into the side of the Dodge. Both front wheels were knocked off the Grant, while the fenders and body of the other car were considerably damaged. No one was injured.

A new Ford roadster, owned by Daniel Craig, of Julian, and driven by Mrs. Mabel Taylor, was badly damaged on Monday morning about 8 o'clock, when it collided with the end of a box car at Armour Gap. The car was standing close to the crossing, and Mrs. Taylor, in explanation of the accident, said that she was too far off the side of the road, so that when she struck the crossing the front wheels of the Ford were deflected by the rail and before she could stop the car it had crashed into the end of the box car. None of the occupants were injured, but the Ford will require a new radiator and fan before it is in a serviceable condition.

On Saturday evening, William Bartlett and an unknown man from Lewistown were the principals in a head-on collision on Thomas Street, in from of the milk station, where Mr. Bartlett is employed. He was driving a Maxwell touring car and said that just as the other car approached his car got out of control in some inexplicable manner and darted to the wrong side of the street, thus putting all the responsibility on himself. Neither of the men was injured.

The new Velie touring car of Elliott Lane's was considerably damaged on Saturday evening about 8 o'clock, when it was struck by another car, while parked on Allegheny street in front of the Lane home. The driver of the other car was C. A. Gingerich, who had a Studebaker sedan. Both fenders on the left side of the Lane car were damaged considerably. The Studebaker sustained two damaged fenders and a broken door.

Two Ford cars figured in a smash-up at Lemont on Monday evening. Ross Nestlerode, of that place, backed his Ford out of Shreck Brothers garage to the main highway and into a Ford roadster driven by B. A. Akerly, salesmen for the Beatty Motor Co., who was passing. The latter car sustained a broken wheel, while the former was turned completely over. Neither of the occupants were injured.

Lock Haven Magistrates Severe on Violators of Fish Laws.

As a result of a hearing before Alderman T. Mark Brungard, last Saturday morning in Lock Haven, Dean Swartz, of that place was found guilty of dynamiting Bald Eagle creek, and was fined $100 and costs. He also provided the sum of $200 bail in case he decided to appeal but later concluded to pay the fine. Russell Caldwell, of Mill Hall, was also up for same charge but proved an alibi and was discharged.

Robert Flanigan, of Mill Hall, was arraigned before Alderman William Rathgeber at the same time, charged with gigging fish illegally in Bald Eagle creek. He pleaded guilty and was fined $25 and costs. Flanigan was apprehended on Friday evening by two game wardens.

ALL IN READINESS FOR BIG GRANGERS PICNIC

PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

Everything is in readiness for the big Grangers Picnic at Centre Hall, which formally opens on Saturday and continues through next week. All that is needed to make the affair a grand success is fair weather. Sometimes the Weather Man shows mighty poor spirit toward the grangers, but this year they are hopeful for better things.

Next Wednesday and Thursday will be given over to the political candidates, who always make it a point to be present to extend hearty handshakes and winning smiles. The Republican County Committee have established headquarters on the picnic grounds, with the genial Wash Reese in charge. Political meetings at grange picnics in past years have rarely attracted very large crowds, and it is by no means certain that either Republicans or Democrats will undertake much of a program along that line. However, the campaign headquarters will be well stocked with literature, and perhaps a campaign cigar or two, and visitors will be welcome. We will not vouch for the quality of the campaign cigars put out by either party. They may be good, and then again they may be just campaign cigars. Following is the program for the week:

The Red Cross will have a first-aid tent on Main Avenue and also conduct a day nursery where babies and small children will be cared for.

Information bureau at administration building.

Russian War Gold Tale Is Revealed

Moscow Sent $331,000,000 to London Before Revolt.

New York.—The $8,000,000 of gold shipped from Paris to London during April was Russian gold, surrendered to Germany under the Brest-Litovsk treaty and later taken from Germany by the allies, according to information received by the department of foreign information of the Bankers Trust company. The $8,000,000 shipment to England, concerning which there had been considerable mystery, was understood to have been part of $62,000,000 which the allies obtained in pursuance of the Versailles treaty.

The gold shipment has brought to light a chapter of the World war some parts of which had never been published before and which concerned Russian gold, according to the trust company.

Before the war Russia had a gold reserve of 1,600,000,000 rubles, or roughly $800,000,000. The problem of financing Russia in the war raised serious questions. With England forced to become the banker of the allied nations prior to America's entrance, it was regarded as essential that Russia ship gold to England in trade for large munitions credits.

Direct From Russia.

The first shipment consisted of $39,000,000 gold sent direct from Russia to England under a battleship convoy, in October, 1914. This method, however, was so dangerous, regardless of efforts to keep the movements a secret from Germany, that later more roundabout routes were chosen, the most successful being from Petrograd to Vladivostok, thence to Japan, then to Vancouver, and then overland to Ottawa.

As the war progressed, Russia's finances began to break down, but the need of sending gold to England as a basis of credits multiplied many times. Public sentiment was so strong against sending its metal holdings abroad, however, that Russia consented to do so only when assured of absolute secrecy. Russia shipped needed balances in the autumn of 1915 and more in 1917. Of these shipments, the Bankers Trust company information service says:

"The shipments of gold were made in the following manner. For $195,000,000 to be delivered under the first arrangement, $40,000,000 was shipped in December, 1915; $49,000,000 in June, 1916; and $97,000,000 in November, 1916. The gold was sent partly to Japan and partly to Canada.

Sent on Jap Warships.

"In accordance with the arrangement made between the British admiralty and the Japanese minister of marine, the gold was sent on Japanese warships and under Japanese escort. In like manner there was shipped from Moscow on the eve of the revolution, in February, 1917, in accordance with the second agreement, $97,000,000 in gold. In consequence of these shipments and that of 1914 the Russian gold stock decreased $331,000,000.

"It will be remembered that the first delivery in October, 1914, of $39,000,000 in gold was an outright purchase of gold by the British government against credits for $58,000,000. To offset the loan of the remaining $292,000,000, England delivered to Russia gold exchequer bonds payable in from three to five years in equal portions without interest.

"The total advances made by the British government to Russia amounted to $2,738,000,000, of which $496,000,000 were advanced during 1914-15, $1,460,000,000 in accordance with the agreement of September, 1915, and $777,000,000 in accordance with the agreement of October, 1916.

"Including the shipments of gold to England and the $62,000,000 referred to in the opening paragraph, it will be seen that in all an amount approximating $400,000,000 of gold, or about half of the holdings of the Russian bank of the state prior to the war, found their way abroad. What may have happened to the remainder of the prewar holdings of the bank of the state we do not know."

Ghost Slew His Pets at Seance, Man Says

Paterson, N. J.—His belief that Edward Overbrook, a spiritualist living at 111 Fair street, made spirits and ghosts do his bidding, caused Joseph Kirwin, who lives next door to Overbrook, to swear out a complaint of disorderly conduct against Overbrook when he found his cat and dog lying dead in the back yard.

Kirwin told Magistrate Munson Forde, who heard the complaint, that after a spiritualist seance in Overbrook's home he heard moans in the yard. He went out and saw a ghost, he said, in the shape of a man enveloped in a gray cloud. Then he heard his dog bark and his cat meow.

The magistrate, in dismissing the charge, said that he did not feel there was sufficient evidence to prove that Overbrook was responsible for the ghost.

Knife Reveals Grass Growing in Man's Eye

Gloucester, England.—Instead of allowing the grass to grow under his feet, a farm laborer here allowed it to grow in one of his eyes.

While working in the fields the laborer got something in his eye which he was unable to remove and as the result of increasing pain, visited a hospital. After examination of the eye the surgeons decided to make an incision and discovered a green blade of grass 1½ inches long lying between the tissues.

MORE MISTAKES ARE MADE IN THE WARM WEATHER

Tests Indicate High Temperatures Reduce Efficiency.

New York.—Scientific tests of workers in diverse lines of endeavor show that on the hot and sultry days of summer your energy, and consequently your physical and mental efficiency, may be reduced by as much as 60 per cent, says Donald A. Laird, Ph. D., associate professor of psychology at Colgate university.

Moreover, when the thermometer registers 90 degrees or more, you are about twice as likely to make an error in work requiring concentration and accuracy as you are on days of moderate temperature.

Just why summertime is mistake time has not been determined exactly, probably it is due in part to discomfort. A more tenable explanation, however, is that the lowered efficiency is due to the changes in the metabolism, or chemical action of the body.

It is a law of chemistry that chemical activity is speeded up by heat and retarded by cold. So at this time of year the chemical action of human bodies probably is increased to such an extent that waste products pile up more rapidly than we can absorb oxygen to destroy them. The effect of this accumulation of waste is the same as fatigue; hence, the "tired feeling" that is common in the summer; the difficulty of performing work requiring concentration.

A test of the working efficiency of the clerical forces of several large banks in an Eastern city, conducted recently by a well-known scientist, showed that the number of errors made in ordinary work was low in spring, that it increased markedly during the summer, dropped again during the fall, and increased again in winter, though not to the summer maximum.

A somewhat similar test of 2,500 workers in Connecticut, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, and of all the students of West Point and Annapolis was attended by a similar result.

However, a person cannot keep his efficiency at a maximum by living and working in a moderate climate the year round. Scientific investigation shows that where there is little change in temperature from day to day the quality of work gradually declines.

The human body requires change, and a change in the weather, whether for better or for worse, invariably is found beneficial.

Asks Cops to Tell "Ma" He Wouldn't Be Home

New York.—Willie Young of 1215 Willow avenue, Hoboken, called Hoboken police headquarters on the phone and asked Sergeant Foley to use the resources of the police force to keep his mother from worrying.

"I'm Willie Young," came the boy's voice over the wire. "I'm up at Hasbrouck Heights and I'm going to stay all night. My mother hasn't any phone and I wish you'd send a policeman to the house and tell her I won't be home. I don't want her to worry or think I'm kidnaped."

"Sure, kid," the sergeant responded. "Any kid who wants to save his mother from worry deserves a favor."

To the reserve policeman who carried the message the sergeant said he believed Willie had enough resource to carry "a message to Garcia."

It Was Real Liquor; Made the Rats Drunk

Omaha, Neb.—Thirteen sleek rats, penned in a cage in a chemist's laboratory, were useful to government agents in obtaining conviction of an Omaha man and his wife on a liquor selling charge, with subsequent sentence of a year in jail and a heavy fine for each in federal court.

The question of sampling the liquor which the pair sold, was brought up in court, and to determine whether it was fit for human consumption, the agents submitted it to a chemist. He fed it to the rats and then watched their reaction.

The rodents displayed many of the characteristics of an intoxicated human, the chemist reported. Not one died, rather they all thrived, he declared on the witness stand. Although defense counsel questioned the admissibility of the experiment as evidence, it was allowed to stand as indicating the potency and possibilities of the liquor for beverage purposes.

Geography Always Defied by Fashion

Flapper Ignoring Climate Shows Atavistic Trials.

Washington.—Another pet theory must be consigned to the rag-bag along with grandmother's black bombazine. Just because Chicago's winter slush originated the unfastened goloshes, or the water-logged marshes of Holland made Fritzie Dutchman take to wooden shoes, not all clothes arose from the necessity of protection against the weather, says a bulletin from the headquarters of the National Geographic society.

In fact, fashion has nearly always defied geography, and the flappers of F street or Broadway, in their chiffon hose and satin pumps in the midst of a January blast, or those who brave the actinic rays of a July sun in furs, are simply displaying atavistic tendencies, for clothes were first worn in warm and semitropical countries.

Man first adorned himself in garments to parade his position or rank before less fortunate individuals, who were content and thoroughly modest in a G-string or a headband. Conceptions of modesty came along later with more highly civilized conditions.

With the donning of many garments to show rank there also grew up the idea of adapting the garments to the materials readily available. The Turkoman, for instance, probably likes his tall, shaggy, sheepskin shako, but he also wears this variety of hat because it is one which the great plains of Russian Central Asia easily afford.

Current history nearly always has influenced the ornamentation of the body or of the costume, as typified by the sphinx-caps worn by the later Egyptians and the Tut-Ankh-Amen and mah-jongg dresses in vogue within the last year or two.

The Climate Is Ignored.

From a scientific standpoint, however, clothing and ornamentation of the body were the same in the beginning, and though climate, during civilized times, has had a marked influence on determining the weight and warmth of the clothing worn in various localities, we have one marked example today of the fact that climate and geography were not the determining factors in the evolution of dress. The Arabs, who live within or in the immediate vicinity of the torrid zone, swath themselves in heavy flowing garments while the inhabitants of Tierra del Fuego, where the climate is cold, rainy and disagreeable, attach by cords across their bodies the skin of one animal which they shift from one side to the other with the direction of the wind.

In the early days when quantity of clothes meant rank and style, the desire "to keep up with the Joneses" probably led some individuals to wear so many garments that they were weakening and deteriorating, for Croesus, who was the Rockefeller of his day, wrote at length on the vice which was overtaking some of his acquaintances, in a letter to his friend Cyrus the Great of Persia.

One student of costumes of all ages has cleverly divided the development of clothing into two classes—the tropical, based on the girdle, and the Arctic, based on the trouser, but even these divisions have their complexities, for the trouser may have been a downward development of the waistband. The Greeks and Romans got a "kick" out of the fact that the northern barbarians against whom they fought wore trousers. It immediately became a new item which they added to their fashion notes.

Some Women Wear Trousers.

But the girdle-trouser classification has some other confusing points—both the men and women wore them. This is still exemplified in the Eskimo and perature the Tokyo policeman bursts forth in all the glory of white coat and hat.

The Vlach of the Balkans also shows a similar disregard for climate in another way. In January, February, June and July he wears his heavy home-Chinese trousered women of today.

As countries developed and boundary lines became fixed, the national character of the peoples got busy on their costumes, and we find the Spaniard with a stiff ruff about his neck and broad wings on his doublet, the German with bizzare slashings on his coat and sleeves, the Dutchman in somber black, and the Venetian in long flowing garments. Out of such human frailties and foibles, mixed with national pride, spiced with climate, and steamed with the imagination of modern modistes, were cooked up the varied and picturesque costumes of the world today.

And even the men of America, who profess to dress comfortably to suit the weather, still show one lingering trace of the age-old heedlessness of climate. Though the sun is shining down with its sometime autumn relentlessness and the good straw which has served faithfully is still in its prime, September 15 is Felt-hat day. The Japanese men are just as bad. Summer comes in Japan on June 1, and on that day regardless of the tem-spun garments, nor does he discard them at night. He shuts his windows to keep out the "dangerous" night air and rolls himself, clothes and all, in heavy blankets and sleeps. But he manifests a contrariness probably unsurpassed by men of any other clime. When caught away from home, this same salamander will sleep in the open on the side of one of his beloved mountains with only a rug to cover him.

Bested By Game Cock

Muskogee, Okla.—Ben Bolton, police sergeant and veteran of many daring escapes, is nursing wounds as the result of an encounter with a game cock. Bolton and several fellow officers were chasing a burglar through the East side when Bolton's course took him through a chicken yard. A game cock, head of a pen, was aroused and believed its claim was being attacked. He flew into the officer, and before he could be coaxed off he had jabbed the officer a number of times with his large spurs. Evidence of blood poisoning developed and the veteran police officer is off duty.

Mongolia Was Eden, Believes Explorer

Kobe, Japan.—Roy Chapman Andrews, finder of the million-year-old dinosaur eggs, believes that the Garden of Eden was located in Mongolia, in the vicinity of where he found his valuable "cold storage" products. He is so firmly convinced of this that he is now returning to China to make additional investigations.

Mr. Andrews is not satisfied with proving that the majority of the world's mammals originated in Mongolia, but hopes to discover the fossil remains of a prehistoric man who roamed these primeval fields millions of years ago. He touched at this port en route to Shanghai and Peking China.

Go Back Million Years.

Speaking of his future explorations, he said:

"It's a big gamble. In our previous trip we first wanted to establish the fact that the first animal life sprung from that country. This time, instead of looking in strata 7,000,000 years old, we will dig in ground 1,000,000 years old."

"There are many signs in our favor," he continued. "First of all, it is now a proven fact that at one time the continent of Asia was linked with America, as well as with Europe. But scientists have been at loss to know where the ancestors of these extinct animals lived. Up to last summer we had the theory that Asia was the source of this life, for it was believed that Asia, particularly Mongolia, was the oldest portion of the earth. While other portions were 'floating,' that is, being periodically submerged beneath the sea and then rising again, Mongolia was high and dry, giving animal life a chance to develop.

"This is what I mean by referring to Mongolia as the Garden of Eden, not the biblical garden, which I do not think ever existed, but a land of plenty, where men and beasts were given an opportunity to develop. Life there was not easy-going, however. No one ever just sat down and reached out to apple tree limbs for food. For history has proved that human or animal life never flourished or developed in tropical lands, where existence drew but little effort."

Mr. Andrews would not give his views regarding the origin of man and the conflict between the fundamentalists and the modernists, other than to say that "it is said that a scientist cannot be a Christian, but I don't believe that. I am not an atheist, yet I believe that the Bible was written allegorically in order that men of the day could grasp the meaning of Christianity. As we teach children today by pictures and allegories, so people 2,000 years ago, whose mentalities were not high, had to be taught.

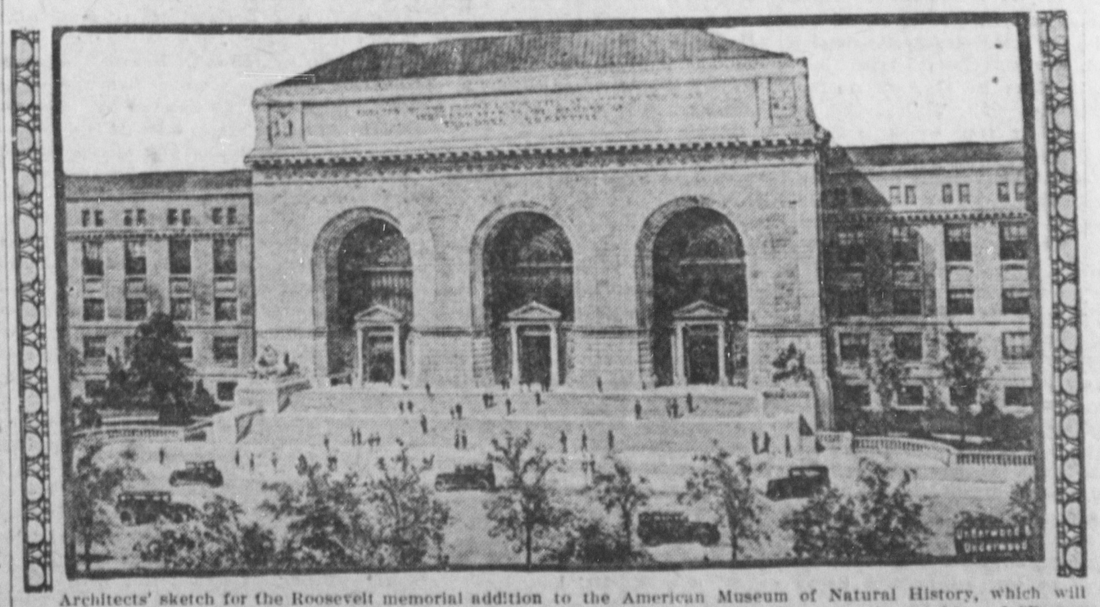
"To prove this theory, then, that animal life found its origin in Mongolia and that that country was the primeval land in a world still in process of formation, we set out last year on our third expedition. That we did prove it is now a matter of history.

"An encouraging factor is the discovery recently of several stone implements on the southern border of Mongolia. That discovery proves that the Stone age existed there, that man was there in prehistoric times. We now go a step further and believe that the first man lived there."

Cyclone's Freak

Fayetteville, Ark.—An Arkansas cyclone turned a peculiar stunt here when it sucked six freight cars out of a rapidly moving train and piled them up in a promiscuous heap by the side of the right of way. The force of the wind tore them loose from the couplings, but oddly enough picked them out so quickly and cleanly that the other part of the train was not affected and no wreck occurred. Railroad men said it was the most unusual accident they had ever witnessed. The cars and their contents were almost a total weck.

Roosevelt Memorial Hall for New York City



Architects' sketch for the Roosevelt memorial addition to the American Museum of Natural History, which will face Central park at Seventy-ninth street, New York. A hall in the addition will house the trophies of "Bwana Tumbo's" great African hunting trip. The plans, by Trowbridge and Livingston, have been approved by the board of trustees of the museum. It is estimated that the cost of the new building, which will be constructed of granite to match the old building, will be about $2,500,000.

Can't Hock the Cow

If you ever run short of funds in Paris and happen to have a cow handy, it won't help you much. The French government has ruled that cows cannot be hocked in pawnshops.

A farmer at Boulogne attempted it. The secretary general of the government pawnshop system ruled against him.

"Cows are not acceptable," the secretary general said, "because they come under the head of perishable goods. A cow hocked by its owner is liable to die in its sad surroundings."—From Collier's.

Source of Mental Health

In society you will not find health, but in Nature. You must converse much with the field and woods if you would imbibe such health into your mind and spirit as you covet for your body. Society is always diseased, and the best is the sickest. There is no scent in it so wholesome as that of the pines, nor any fragrance so penetrating and restorative as that of everlasting in high pastures. Without that our feet at least stood in the midst of Nature, all our faces would be pale and livid.—Thoreau.

Health Talks No. 1

YOUR STOMACH

The stomach is a conical-shaped organ, high in the left abdominal cavity. It prepares food for absorption into the blood by the small intestine. It functions automatically. Disorders of the digestive system or indiscretions in eating bring unmistakable S. O. S. signals from the stomach. Belching gas, nausea, dizziness or biliousness are indications of stomach trouble.

Many remedies have been designed to combat these conditions, but one in particular has proven unusually effective. This medicine (Jaques' Capsules) is readily obtainable at drug stores. It is in capsule form and easy to take. Jaques' Capsules are inexpensive—60 cents for a generous supply. Yet from the standpoint of the relief they bring are worth many times their cost. If unobtainable from your druggist, will be sent postpaid by the Jaques Capsule Co., Plattsburg, N. Y.

Wasn't Feeling Well, Man Coughs Up Lizard

Houlton, Maine.—Herb Tealing of this place has just gone through an experience he does not care to have repeated. For the last few weeks he has not been feeling in the best of health and complained of something in his stomach, which seemed to be crawling and for which he could not account. He had been losing his appetite and was hardly able to walk.

The other morning he had a coughing spell and a live lizard was coughed up. For a time Mr. Tealing was ill at ease, but he has begun to recover. He thinks he must have swallowed the lizard while drinking alongside the road somewhere.

DARING BOY SCOUT SAVES GIRL'S LIFE

Rescues Her from Wheels of Elevated Train.

New York.—One of Manhattan's crowded subways recently saw a woman saved from death through an alert and fearless scout good turn.

While standing on the Wall Street station early one Saturday afternoon, Scout John H. Jebens, Jr., of Troop 5, Babylon, L. I., noticed a young woman perilously near the edge of the platform and swaying dizzily. She seemed to be trying to move back, but was unable to take any steps. At this moment, as the train came rushing towards the station, the young woman lost complete control of her strength, and would have lunged forward to the tracks, had not the scout jumped to her side, and grabbed her. The weight of the falling woman, however, pulled the pair over the platform. They fell to the side of the track, and landed against the end of the first car. To save the girl and himself from being caught in the wheels or dragged, the boy reached for the lattice at the end of the first car. His clothes were caught in the coupling and torn. He himself was dragged a short distance, but he managed to keep the girl from slipping to the tracks.

When the train came to a standstill, the scout steadied himself and started to lift the woman to safety. Willing hands lent aid in bringing the fainting victim into the car. The boy aided in helping revive the patient. As she was regaining consciousness her nose began to bleed. The boy, applying his first aid training, stopped the bleeding.

At Fourteenth street the girl got off the train to meet an acquaintance who was awaiting her there. The boy went on his way quietly, without even disclosing his name.

The next day the girl's father wrote a special letter of appreciation to the National Boy Scout office, and enclosed the scout's registration card, which had dropped from his pocket in the strenuous rescue, and, when picked up by a bystander, had been placed in the girl's bag by mistake.

Woman Throws Dog to Stop Motor Policeman

Rochester, N. Y.—According to the evidence brought out when Mrs. Clara Nelligan, twenty-seven years old, was arraigned before Judge Kohlmetg, Motorcycle Patrolman Louth had an interesting time when he arrested her the day before. She was accused of operating an automobile while intoxicated. She pleaded not guilty.

Louth motorcycled after the woman following her collision with Joseph Pruiter, fifty-five, who was sweeping the street in Clinton avenue north, near Marietta street, where the woman is alleged to have run him down. When the motorcycle officer called to her to stop, she answered him by "stepping on the gas." The officer steadily gained on her car and just as he came abreast of it he got the surprise of his life when, he claims, the woman suddenly threw her Airedale dog at him. Overcoming his slight discomfiture, he renewed the chase, but Mrs. Nelligan finally decided to stop and argue the matter with him. The patrol wagon was summoned and she was driven to headquarters. The dog, being temporarily forgotten, followed the "blue taxi" and was there to greet his mistress when she alighted, assisted by the attendant and was escorted to a freshly dusted cell.

Then the police faced the great problem of what to do with the dog. There was no charge against him, unless it was creating a disturbance by his barking, but even so where were they to house the canine? The situation was finally met by one of the motorcycle officers loading the dog into his side-car and conveying him to the Nelligan domicile.

Find Watch Long Lost

Wilkes-Barre, Pa. — Twenty-two years ago—'way back in 1902—Jewett Dyer, Wilkes-Barre business man, had a gold watch stolen from him in Baltimore. The watch was valued at $200. He reported the theft to the police, but never heard of it again.

Recently he received a letter through the local police from the chief of police in Baltimore, saying they had recovered his watch and asking him to identify it. Dyer did so and has become an enthusiastic booster for all police departments and their efficiency.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

Neal Gallatin of the Spring-Builders

If a man who makes two blades of grass to grow where grew only one before is a philanthropist and benefactor, what is a woman who makes to bubble a cold, sweet, refreshing spring where was before but a wet place or a puddle? Here is the portrait of Neal Gallatin—the pen name of Mrs. Donald Ogilbee of Casper, Wyo.—one of the founders of the Spring-Builders of America, a new organization which should soon have a nation-wide membership. It has no officers, no constitution, no fees. And there is just one way of joining the elect.

You hunt up a spring—neglected, forlorn, uninviting. You dig it out. You line the bowl. You fix it so that its waters will run off and so the storm waters will not drain in. Then you mark it "Living Waters," "Spring-Builders of America," etc., according to instructions from headquarters (1004 Oak Crest, Casper). So—and so only—shall you acquire the proud title of Spring-Builder.

It being a work of love, you can go as far as you like. You can put a canopy over your spring and make a walk to it. You can plant trees, shrubs, flowers. You can set up seats, table, oven. And you can put a sign beside the hot and dusty road bearing an arrow and the magic word, "Spring."

Or you may keep your secret—except from the birds and wild things and a friend or two.

Mrs. J. W. Davis Well Known at Capital

If fate should put Mrs. John W. Davis in the White House, the nation would have a "First Lady of the Land" who is at home as an experienced and charming hostess. She also has many friends in Washington. In her husband's regime as solicitor general she was a favorite in the official and diplomatic set.

As Ellen Graham Bassel, daughter of John and Martha Bassel of Clarksburg, W. Va., she was identified as one of the "Bassel belles."

The oldest sister married Percy Goff, a son of Senator Goff, who for many years represented West Virginia. Mrs. Goff died the first week of the Democratic convention and it is for her that Mrs. Davis is now in mourning. Two other sisters married S. M. Gallaher of Charleston, W. Va., and Philip Watson of Indianapolis.

In London, as the wife of the American ambassador, for two seasons Mrs. Davis was hostess at the American Luncheon club, was honorary president of the American Woman's club as well as member of its board of managers and took an active part in other patriotic societies. Mrs. Davis is mainly identified in Washington with the Democratic National Women's club of which she is a founder-member.

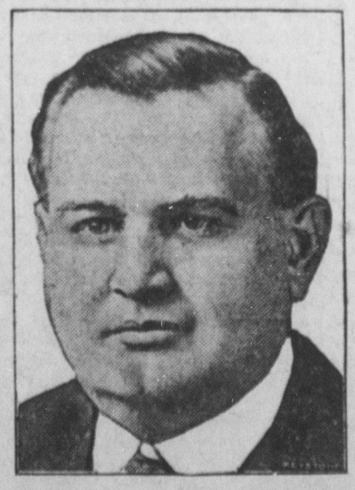
Mr. Davis had been a widower twelve years when they were married. His first wife, Miss Julia McDonald of Charlestown, W. Va., died in 1900, the year after their marriage, when their daughter, Julia, was born. Julia is now Mrs. William McMillan Adams. Mr. Adams is representing the United States Rubber company in Copenhagen.

U. S.-Mexican Claims to Be Balanced

How much shall we have to pay Mexico for damages caused by the Vera Cruz occupation—which did not secure a Mexican salute to the flag—and by the Pershing punitive expedition—which did not get Villa dead or alive? It remains to be seen. And how much shall Mexico have to pay us for damages in the various revolutions from 1910 to 1920? That also remains to be seen. Anyway, Ambassador Charles B. Warren has just resigned, on the ground that his work is finished. And one result of conferences in Mexico last year in which he and John Barton Payne represented the United States is that two claims commissions are at work settling the foregoing questions.

On its part the United States government has named Nathan L. Miller (portrait herewith), former governor of New York, who was also a former judge of the Court of Appeals, for the general commission, and Ernest B. Perry of Lincoln, Neb., a former judge, for the special commission. The special commission will deal with and decide upon all claims against Mexico caused by the series of revolutions from 1910 to 1920. The general commission will adjudicate upon all claims in general. The committee of congress at Washington which investigated these claims in 1923 announced that the total amount of them would be $505,002,434.

Newlon Now Heads National Educators



Denver is taking on airs these days over the election of Jesse H. Newlon as president of the National Education association, for he was its superintendent of schools, re-elected last year under a five-year contract. The National Education association is composed of 130,000 educators representing the public school system of the country.

Newlon was born at Salem, Ind., July 16, 1882. He was graduated from Indiana university in 1907, and in 1914 from Columbia university, where he took his master's degree in school administration. After teaching in Indiana and Illinois he went to Lincoln, Neb., where he was superintendent of schools, 1917-20. Then he went to Denver. With Charles H. Johnston and Frank G. Pickell he is joint author of a book entitled: "Administration of Junior and Senior High Schools," and has contributed numerous articles to educational periodicals. He is a member of the National Council of Education and the National Society for the Study of Education. He is also a member of the Delta Upsilon, Phi Kappa Delta and Kappa Delta Phi fraternities, and of the Rotary club.

ALL PARTS OF CALF MAKE GOOD DISHES

Appetizing Dish of Calves' Liver and Onions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Calves' brains are usually cooked in water to which a little vinegar and salt have been added, then cut up and scrambled with eggs. Cooked brains may also be breaded and fried like cutlets or croquettes.

Sweetbreads are usually parboiled and creamed, but they may be baked with a little fat, or breaded and fried as cutlets. For salad combine finely chopped celery with the boiled sweetbreads and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

The liver is usually fried with bacon. It is also good if braised and served in place of game.

The tongue, either fresh or corned, may be boiled and served hot with a tomato sauce or sliced cold and served with salad. A fresh tongue may be braised.

Hearts may be boiled, or stuffed and baked. The heart is a very strong, compact muscle and requires long, slow cooking in order to render it satisfactory for serving.

CHILDREN SUGGEST FOOD FOR LUNCHES

Help to Make Variety for Well Balanced Diet.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If the children are interested in their own school lunches and are taught how to pack them properly, they will not only take this task off the mother's hands, but help to suggest foods which give the necessary variety for a well-balanced diet. Children should be taught to prepare sandwiches well and to pack them neatly in waxed paper so they will neither fall to pieces nor dry out before they are to be eaten. An occasional discussion of foods suitable for the school lunch will lead to surprisingly good suggestions from the children themselves, as to what they like to have, or what other children bring.

In packing the lunch basket every precaution should be taken to keep the foods clean and in good condition. Foods that spoil easily should be avoided in warm weather. Paper napkins or towels and thin waxed or parchment wrapping paper are inexpensive, especially if bought in large quantities. These not only protect the lunch but the children's clothing. Washable napkins may be used instead, but they are more troublesome and are likely to be lost.

Sandwiches, sweet foods and fruits should be wrapped separately and the heaviest things put at the bottom of the lunch box. Cup custards, apple sauce, jelly and other soft foods can be carried in paper cups or cartons, in small screw-top jars or covered jelly glasses. Milk from home is desirable whenever it can be carried, if no provision can be made for serving it at school.

Recipe for a Reliable Frosting Is Outlined

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following recipe for a reliable frosting, worked out in the experimental kitchen of the bureau of home economics:

Place the white of an egg, a cupful of sugar and four tablespoonfuls of cold water in a double boiler over a low fire, and beat until it stiffens enough to hold shape. Then add a pinch of salt and beat until thick enough to spread. Add one teaspoonful of vanilla or other flavoring. Chocolate flavoring may be made by melting two and one-half squares of unsweetened chocolate and pouring into the mixture when it has stiffened enough to hold shape; then cook until thick, and spread. For caramel icing caramelize two or three tablespoonfuls of sugar until dark in color, and add an equal amount of boiling water. Substitute two teaspoonfuls of this sirup for two teaspoonfuls of the water in the frosting recipe, and continue according to the above directions.

Rice and Chili Chicken

Cut up a frying-size chicken. Fry in hot lard for a few minutes, then add one onion chopped fine, one green sweet pepper, one tomato, one tablespoonful of chili powder and half a cupful of rice. Add salt and pepper and enough hot water to cook the rice until well done.

PRESERVED PEACHES GOOD FOR A CHANGE

Characteristic Flavor Not Harmed by Short Cooking.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The merit of this recipe lies in the fact that the characteristic flavor of fresh peaches is not destroyed by the short cooking, and is well preserved when the peaches are embedded in jelly. Even in those cases where the jelly fails to set well because of excess of juice or lack of pectin, the product should still be found worth while because of its superior flavor.

Many fruits which are delicious in flavor when fresh change altogether when cooked a long time or made into preserve the usual way. By jellying sliced peaches in the way described, an unusual product is obtained. The same idea can be applied to raspberries, strawberries, pineapples and other fruits which do not, as a rule, lend themselves well to jelly-making. Department Circular 254 gives directions for preparing the pectin extracts to make these jellied fruits and separate recipes for each one.

Jellied Sliced Peaches.

2 cupfuls (1 pound) sliced peaches
2½ cupfuls (1½ pounds) sugar
½ cupful apple pectin extract, extra strength, or ½ cupful lemon or orange pectin extract.

Use sweet, fully ripened fruit of rich flavor; it is essential to use fruit of the highest quality, if a superior product is to be obtained, since the flavor of the cooked preserve cannot be expected to excel that of the raw material.

Peel the peaches and remove the pits, slice them very thin, about one-eighth inch in thickness. Measure this sliced fruit, add the sugar and mix carefully. Heat slowly over a low flame or at the back of the stove, stirring constantly, until the juice flows freely and the sugar is dissolved. Then increase the heat and bring to a vigorous boil as rapidly as possible. A very short time of heating is essential if the fresh flavor is to be preserved. Boil hard for one minute with continual stirring. Remove from the fire and add the pectin. Mix well, skim if necessary, and pour at once into glasses.

Composition of Several Kinds of Common Bluing

Bluings differ in composition as well as in form, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The commonest bluings are prussian blue, aniline, and ultramarine. Indigo is now rarely used. Bluings in solution color fabrics more evenly than does bluing that is merely in suspension. Prussian blue is an inexpensive soluble salt of iron. It is easily decomposed by soap and if clothes are not thoroughly rinsed, iron-rust stains may appear on them when ironed. Bluing can be tested by adding strong soapsuds; if the color changes from blue to yellow, iron is present.

Aniline blues are also soluble in water and are probably the most satisfactory. Ultramarine is not very soluble. It is sold in balls or cubes. When used, the water must be kept well stirred to prevent the bluing from spotting or streaking the clothes. The balls or cubes wrapped in heavy muslin or flannel so that only the very finest particles may pass through, should be soaked in a bowl of water, and the blue liquid added to the water for rinsing and bluing the clothes.

RACERS TUNING UP

Race Officials Predict New World's Record at Labor Day Classics.

The second highest lap ever turned on Altoona speedway by the midget 122-cubic inch cars was recorded Thursday, Aug. 21, by Tommy Milton when he roared around the giant oval for several laps at a gait of 121.3 miles an hour under a sun so hot that he threw treads from 3 tires in skidding through the turns.

Milton's first mark is the nearest approach to the 123.2 miles made at the Altoona opening last year by HarryHartz, but race officials declared that Tommy's performance was a certain forecast of new world's at Altoona at the 250-mile championship classic on Labor Day as he reached this speed without a single adjustment on carbureters or lubrication, and is expected to go at least 3 miles faster when his machine is tuned for the race.

The greatest problem of the driver is expected to be tires if the weather in this section continues extremely hot. Hartz, Milton and several of the other famous pilots have narrowly averted serious accidents on the turns when the rubber treads have melted under the combined heat of the boards and the terrific speed. So intense is the impact of the tires on the boards that Jimmy Murphy in practice had a splinter no longer than a match driven through casing and heavy cord fabric.

Indicating the high pitch of interest in this section over the coming race, close to 2,000 rail birds lined the pits and fronts of the huge grandstands watching tho pilots tuning their cars although the official qualifying trials under Starter Fred J. Wagner, internationally known sportsman, are not scheduled to start until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Millers to Meet in Williamsport.

The annual convention of the Pennsylvania Millers' association will be held at Williamsport for three days beginning Sept. 10. All millers in the state, whether members of the association or not, have been invited to be present. Problems of the industry will be discussed. A number of interesting addresses will be given. At the close of the convention the visiting millers will be taken to Muncy, where they will inspect two manufacturing plants whose product is milling machinery.

L. Y. Greene in New Job.

L. Y. Greene, for some time past superintendent of the Port Matilda brick plant, has been appointed assistant superintendent of the Claysburg plant of the General Refractories Co. During his residence at Port Matilda he won many friends who rejoice with him in his selection for the Claysburg position.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders From The Pennsylvania State College.

MARKETING FRUIT—Don't forget the home market for fruit. In many localities fruit is brought in from a considerable distance when local producers could easily fill the demand. Inform the people of your home locality that you have fruit for sale and then give them a well-graded, quality product. An attractive road-side market will sell much fruit.

FOR THE POULTRY FLOCK—If your hens begin to slack up in their egg production, try feeding them a small quantity of moist mash in the middle of the afternoon. This practice tends to whet up their appetites and induce them to consume more feed. Be watchful of their body weight and endeavor to keep it up to normal by careful feeding of grain.

RASPBERRY DISEASES—All the raspberry patches should be given a final roghing to remove the plants affected with such degenerative diseases as Mosaic, Leaf Curl and Eastern Blue Stem. About 25 counties of the state now have sources of disease free plants. Plant disease specialists at the Pennsylvania State College advise growers to order plants from these sources at an early date.

NATIONAL DAIRY SHOW—Pennsylvania dairymen who are planning to enter cattle at the National Dairy Show at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, from September 27 to October 4, are warned to get their entries in by September.

PREPARE FOR FRUIT HARVEST—Have you inspected your fruit picking and packing equipment. With labor scarce, it is very important that everything be in "tip-top" shape when the fruit is ripe. See that you have a good supply of packages for packing the fall and winter fruit. A good grading and packing table will save labor and will result in a better product.

TO SPEAK FOR COOLIDGE

Congressman Swoope Invited to Make Campaign Addresses.

Conngressman Tilson, who is managing the speakers campaign for Coolidge and Dawes in the Eastern part of the country, has written Congresman Swoope the following letter:

"As you may know, I have been selected to manage the Speakers Bureau for the Eastern Headquarters of the Republican National Committee and I am now preparing a list of speakers of national prominence who will be available for use outside of their own states during the coming campaign.

"I hope that I shall have the benefit of your services for a considerable part of the campaign and I wish you would drop me a line at once letting me know whether I can count upon you for work of this kind during September and October.

"I would like to have you work with me in the speaking campaign in the east and wish you would let me know whether you can help and when you will be available for speaking engagements."

Following this letter, Mr. Swoope received a telegram asking him to speak in New York and Massachusetts. If his engagements at home will permit, Mr. Swoope will make some speeches in those states during the campaign.

Unusual Auto in Town.

A rare stunt in the design of an automobile came to town last week attracting a lot of attention wherever it was seen. The car is a truck with an extension frame, upon which has been mounted a body which is, in every particular except size, a faithful reproduction of a package of "Life Savers, the candy mint with the hole." A. D. Law, who is traveling through Pennsylvania with his unique car, stated while in Bellefonte that there are more than 60 of these trucks on the road and several in foreign countries. Mr. Law is always in good taste with everyone, for his "sample" greeting to friend or foe is "Have a Life Saver."

OVER THE COUNTY

A position as instructor in Pennsylvania Village, Laurelton, has been accepted by Miss Sarah Snyder. She is a graduate of the Centre Hall High School and is now taking the course at the Central State Normal at Lock Haven, having intended to teach a public school the coming session.

Fred Billett, a baseball player of Coleville, sustained a fracture of the leg on Saturday afternoon of last week while his team was playing at Hublersburg. He was rushed to the office of a Bellefonte physician, who had the unfortunate young man placed in the hospital, where he is now convalescing.

County Commissioners Spearly, Swabb and Austin and Clerk S. Claude Herr, met at Spring Mills last week with County Surveyor Shattuck and Superintendent of State Highways Roberts to look over the bridge proposition at the spring on the state highway. This is now a wooden structure and has been in a dilapidated condition for a number of years. From what can be gathered large tiles will take the place of the old bridge, provided Mr. Shattuck passes favorably on the plan.

Thursday of last week while applying a second coat of paint to G. R. Mensch's house, at Millheim, Daniel Auman fell from a ladder to the ground and was painfully bruised. Mr. Auman had placed his ladder on the west side of the house and was applying paint near the eaves of the roof. A faulty round on the ground ladder caused the hook holding the extension in place to give way and the extension started earthward with Mr. Auman on it. A bucket of paint hooked on the upper ladder caught the one upright of the ground ladder and stopped the descent with such abruptness that Mr. Auman was thrown to the ground. An examination showed no bones were broken, but the unfortunate man had painful bruises about the right side and back.

Fox Hunter Puzzled Over Scent Mystery

No one should write of hunting without alluding to the important question of scent. To ignore the subject is gravely unconventional, if not worse. That at least is the excuse which Miss E. E. Somerville offers for quoting this incomprehensible incident in her memories of Irish life:

We were hunting in the hills. It was a bright and sunny day with a light and vanishing touch of frost. The hounds were drawing along the southern side of a high hill covered with short rough grass and heather, with furze brakes here and there among the rocks. We had not "found," but the hounds were busy "feathering" and were obviously sure that a fox had been about. Then one of the field rode up to me and said with the icy calm that so often masks the fullness of pride:

"There's your fox, master!" He pointed with his whip to something that looked like a rusty can lying under a furze bush.

A fox! Not as I first feared dead, but very much alive, I cracked my whip at him, and he slid away over the hill, crossing after half a dozen yards or so a wide blackened patch where furze had been burnt. In an instant we brought the hounds to the place where he had lain. They made no outcry. They were interested, but no more than that. We took them on and crossed the burnt patch, and suddenly on its farther verge they all put their heads down and went away with a shout, and we had a brilliant forty minutes, till the fox beat us on the edge of the sea and got safe into a slit in the cliffs.

Why should the bed of the fox have been less odorous than his light feet, and why did the hounds not acknowledge him until he had crossed the burnt bit of hill? These things are a mystery.—Youth's Companion.

American Indian May Have Come From Egypt

It is probable, if not certain, that the American Indian did not come from Egypt but that in centuries following the glacial era, or even later, tribes started to migrate. It is also very possible that at that particular time Asia and America were not separated by a body of water in the northern part—that is, between Kamchatka and Alaska by the Behring sea. Then why would it be improbable that a few tribes started on their migration in a northeast direction as later migrations started in a northwest direction?

Furthermore, one of the oldest symbols of the world can be found from Siberia to Ceylon and from Alaska to the Tierra del Fuego, if not in its entirety, always in a recognizable form. I am speaking of the swastika and we know that the swastika is Asian in its origin, says Dr. P. Anther in Adventure Magazine.

The features of the Indians are not Mongolian but Asian. There is no doubt there and in the eyes of some you find the same characteristics and also the cheekbones in both are prominent, but not like the Mongolian race.

Learn From Lazy Man

Managers of a department store were asked to pick out their best salesman, writes Fred Kelly in the Nation's Business, that others might study his methods. They looked up their records and picked a man, but an investigation of his methods quickly showed that he was only a mediocre salesman. True, he had sold more than anybody else in his department, but this was because he had the heavy expense of a sick wife and consequently unusual incentive to work hard for more commissions. While he sold a lot of goods, he did it with wasteful expenditure of his energies. Several other salesmen sold almost as much as he did with only about half the effort. As Frank Gilbreth says, "The ideal man to learn methods from is one so lazy that he works barely hard enough to avoid being fired."

There Is Much to See

Often as I work I stop to see, really see, see everything, or to listen, and it is the wonder of wonders how much there is in this old world which we never dreamed of, how many beautiful, curious, interesting sights and sounds there are which ordinarily make no impression upon our clogged, overfed and preoccupied minds. I have also had the feeling—it may be unscientific, but it is comforting—that any man might see like an Indian or smell like a hound if he gave to the senses the brains which the Indian and the hound apply to them. And I'm pretty sure about the Indian! It is marvelous what a man can do when he puts his entire mind upon one faculty and bears down hard.—David Grayson.

What Are We Coming To?

The other day in this city an operatic tenor offered as evidence of his affection for his wife the plea that he always washed the dishes, says the New York Evening Post. Such stories as these offer a fine opportunity for novelists to portray the wifely sturdy oaks and the husbandly clinging vines. The tired business woman coming home, finding the easy chair near the fire, her slippers warm, while the husband sits on the arm of her chair, lights her cigarette and prattles about his household cares—a very pretty picture. And the husbands need not mind, so long as their wives don't hear them.

Jealousy Proved Fatal to English Musician

Certainly the most destructive of human emotions is that of jealousy. With the exception of love and war nothing seems to be so provocative to the green-eyed monster, who seems to have the faculty of consuming all those who admit him to their souls, as music. A list of the famous musical jealousies would be interesting. It would run into the hundreds. Opera companies are usually nests of jealousy.

Possibly one of the most famous cases of musical jealousy is that of Henry Cooke, deceased (1672). Cooke was a fighter who gloried in the term of captain. He joined the king's army and fought bravely, it is said, but when the commonwealth came into existence he was obliged to make his living teaching music. Eventually he became gentleman and master of the children when the chapel royal was established again in 1660. There he had as his pupils no less than Purcell, John Blow and Pelham Humphrey.

Humphrey so closely imitated the work of his master that after some time he was able to supplant him in his state position. Captain Cooke flew into a rage of jealousy, and this continued until in his death notice there appeared the significant line, "died of jealousy."

Great Statesman Had Genius of Invention

Thomas Jefferson, signer of the Declaration of Independence and third President of the United States, was of an inventive turn of mind as well as being a fairly good violinist and something of a scientist, remarks the Detroit News. On one of his tours of Europe he was struck by the bad construction of the plows in use by the peasants of France.

The moldboard, a device above the share to turn over the earth, he decided, required redesigning. He spent the greater part of his leisure time for two years evolving a moldboard that would be most effective.

Satisfied, at length, that he had succeeded, Jefferson sent a plow equipped with his new device to the Royal Agriculture Society of the Seine. A medal which the society awarded him—for the plow proved to be all he had hoped for—followed him to New York, and 18 years later, the society sent him a specially made plow containing his improvement as a token of appreciation for what he had done for agriculture in France.

"Cates" Word Little Used

The word "cates," meaning dainty foods, is probably never used except in poetry, and seldom there, yet we call the person who caters for our food a caterer, and in that form the word is of everyday occurrence.

It has come into some prominence lately in connection with the fifth centenary celebrations of the famous Dick Whittington, whose fame rests more solidly on his possession of a cat than upon any municipal honors which came to him, observes London Tit-Bits.

There have been all manner of learned discussions as to Whittington's cat, one of which pointed to the probability that this city merchant had a ship called the Cat. But the late Professor Rowley of Bristol was perfectly sure that "cat" was an abbrevition of this old English word "cate," meaning provisions, which survives, even in our geography, in the Cate river at Plymouth.

The Century Plant

The belief that the century plant blooms every 100 years is a myth, according to Pathfinder Magazine. The flowering of this interesting plant depends upon the climate and rapidity of growth. In warm climates such as Mexico and Central America, the original home of the century plants, they grow rapidly and usually bloom about the seventh of eighth year, seldom later than the twelfth. In colder climates the period before bloom is much longer. Some authorities say that in hot houses 80 to 100 years may elapse before the plant flowers, a fact which probably gave rise to the century myth from which the plant gets its popular name. After flowering the century plant dies down to the ground. However, new plants arise from lateral buds.

Flowers of the Desert

Arizona deserts have their own flowers. In places the supply is abundant, the growth large, the flowers when in bloom of marked beauty, the big yucca and the sotol, both members of the lily family, showing beautiful bloom on tall and stately stalks.

One of the interesting desert growths is the water cactus, so named because its great stalk, from five to ten feet high and as large in circumference as a barrel. It has a heavy pulpy covering from which it is possible to squeeze goodly amounts of water, and Indians and travelers are quick to turn to the cactus when water supplies are short, says the Detroit News.

Simply Couldn't

Dorothy, aged five, had been given a pretty blue-silk sash and the first day she wore it she was constantly running to her mother to have it tied.

"Why, Dorothy," said her mother, "This makes the fifth time I've tied your sash this morning. You must learn to tie it yourself."

"But how can I, mamma," replied the little miss, "when I'm standing around in the front all the time?"

Why Is It?

That some people will follow the advice of a stock salesman, who makes large commissions and has a direct interest in a sale, and ignore the advice of a banker who has nothing in view but the protection of his depositors.

The preferred stock of a certain manufacturing company which was sold to a number of local people at one hundred dollars per share, is now going begging at fifty dollars.

And some men sold Liberty Bonds to buy this stock!

AFRAID SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Operation Advised, But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made It Unnecessary

Glasgow, Kentucky. — "I was rundown, nervous, with no appetite. My side had given me trouble for five or six years. At times it was all I could do to live, and the doctor said I couldn't live but a short time longer without an operation. That was two years ago. My sister-in-law recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She had never used it herself, but she said one of her neighbors suffered just like I did, and it cured her. After I had taken four bottles the pain left my side. I had a fine appetite to eat anything that was put before me, and I began to do all my work and my washing, something I hadn't done for years. I am a dressmaker, and this last fall I began suffering with my side again, so I began taking the Vegetable Compound again. I am on my fourth bottle, which makes eight in all I have taken. I feel so much better when I take it and everybody tells me I look better. My appetite improves and I feel stronger in every way. I am a very nervous woman and it seems to help my nerves so much."—Mrs. MAGGIE WALLER, Glasgow, Ky.

A Tactful Man

Sir Ribert Baden-Powell can always be relied upon to tell a story worth retelling. At the recent dinner of the Federation of Rambling Clubs he related an amusing incident in which he and his wife were concerned while camping in a wood belonging to one of the newly rich.

Lady Baden-Powell asked permission to put up a tent in the wood. After some hesitation, sanction was forthcoming.

"But you must bring the general to see me," insisted the landowner.

Her ladyship pointed out the general, who was busy unharnessing the horse.

"That him?" exclaimed the landowner. "Good heavens! I thought he was tall, slim and—well, handsome!"

Airplane Patrol

In order to conserve Ontario's forest wealth and to protect the lumbering and paper industry, in which $75,000,000 is invested, the Ontario government has bought an airplane fleet consisting of 13 machines, to patrol the timber areas and detect fires in their incipient stages. The planes are also to be used to make a survey of Ontario's forest wealth, with a view to checking up on the timber concessions and seeing that the government is obtaining sufficient return from them, and also with a view to determining the amount of reforestation needed.

If one is not really democratic, he boasts of his democracy.

DR. D. S. O'CONNOR VETERANS' FRIEND

Veterans of the World war who have suffered as a result of having been gassed, blinded, crippled or afflicted with tuberculosis or other ills while in the service have a staunch friend in Dr. Denis S. O'Connor of Waterbury, Conn. In recognition of his splendid work in their behalf Doctor O'Connor has just been appointed vice chairman of the American Legion rehabilitation committee in the Second district, including the states of New York, Connecticut and New Jersey.

Needs of these disabled men have been a constant care of Doctor O'Connor. His first active work in their behalf was as a member of the relief and service committee of Corporal Coyle post of Waterbury. In that capacity he got an insight at first hand into what he believed to be gross injustices in the treatment of the men by the United States veterans' bureau.

He had spent much time and effort in fighting through claims which had been rejected, as he thought, unjustly, by the veterans' bureau. In 1923 he was elected service officer of his post. His efficient and self-sacrificing work in that position led to his recent appointment.

Doctor O'Connor was instrumental in having introduced into congress a bill to allow former service men who develop insanity or tuberculosis a longer period in which to file claims for government compensation and care than was then allowed. This object was attained by the passage of the Reed-Johnson bill at the last session of congress.

Hailing from Biddeford, Me., Doctor O'Connor is a graduate of the high school there. After attending the University of Maine and Bowdoin college he graduated from Bowdoin Medical school in 1919.

He had sought admission to the Plattsburg training camp. He was refused a recommendation for admission because he had already specialized training in medicine. He was told to continue that work. He then enlisted in the naval reserve force. Before he was called to the colors he was sent by the United States health service into northern Maine to fight the influenza epidemic which was raging there.

After completing his work in Maine he reported at the First Naval district headquarters at Boston and was sworn into service. He was ordered to Portland, Me., where he was released from active service in December, 1918. He was commissioned a lieutenant, junior grade, in the medical corps of the navy in December, 1922.

Legionnaire Finds Home for Post in Iowa Town

American Legionnaire H. H. Studley of Cumberland, Iowa, plus an idea, plus the initiative to carry that idea into effect is the combination responsible for the stability and rapid growth of the Cumberland post of the Legion. Legionnaire Studley who, when not engaged in doing most of the town's banking, is busy looking about for some way to improve the local American Legion post, observed the difficulty of holding a post together without clubrooms. He looked about the town and found a basement that was large and had the potentiality of a fine clubroom. He donned his overalls and after two days hard labor had the room all painted and ready for meetings. The post now has a rapidly increasing membership, whereas a few weeks ago it was about to disband.

Fine Membership Record

The Elmer Wilson American Legion post of Corwith, Iowa, recently announced a paidup membership of fifty-five members out of a possible fifty-eight in the district. The entire population of Corwith is only seven hundred.

American War Mother

MADAME SCHUMANN-HEINK, the great German musician, but greater American war mother, recently delivered a profoundly impressive address before the American Legionnaires of Cheyenne, Wyo., in which she extolled the Legion, and in a voice still suggestive of her native land, she expressed with beautiful simplicity her sentiments for this, the land of her adoption. The war mother of Schumann-Heink spoke when she said: "Just like you boys, I simply did my bit—what every mother ought to do. I love it, America, because America took me into its arms and gave me everything. I was poor when I came. America was good to me—so good to me. It made it possible for me to educate my boys. I have—I had—six boys and two girls. I have only four boys now. When the war broke out I saw my duty, my opportunity to pay back—pay a little back—for the goodness America had been to me. I could serve these people I adore and love. I was made a better woman by the war. As long as I can I will serve the soldiers—the soldiers who were, and the soldiers now. I will serve with you any time you call."

YOUTHFUL LEGION MAN IS HONORED

Oklahoma's youngest Legionnaire is going to West Point. Not content with claiming the honor of being the state's most youthful Legion member, Frank Hosch of Cushing, Okla., just turned twenty-one, will soon enter the United States Military academy at West Point to become a future "Looey" or maybe a general with "bookoo" stars.

At fourteen, when boys are generally wont to moon over puppy love notes from little girls in pink dresses, Hosch enlisted in the United States navy to fight the Huns. Throughout the war he served as a loyal "gob," but with the signing of the armistice the young belligerent sought a more exciting field than the prosaic maritime duties on board a cruiser in times of peace. Immediately after receiving his discharge he signed up for service with the army in Siberia.

With the return of the American troops from Siberia, and with no more wars on the horizon, the two-time veteran journeyed to Cushing there to begin the hardest fight of his career—the fight to get an education and support himself at the same time.

He was handicapped by the years he had lost in serving his country, but he had gained much in perseverance and the power to concentrate on an objective until it was reached. It mattered not whether that objective entailed going to school through the day and studying and working far into the night, the objective was to be reached, and so religiously did he keep his eye on it that he took double class work at the Cushing high school and finished the four-year course in two years, with honors. Then in addition, to soothe that savage fighting breast of his, he took music lessons, and is considered an excellent violinist.

With his diploma under his arm the fighting Legionnaire declared he wasn't through with the battle for education, and that West Point was his next objective. Cushing Legionnaires helped him over the rough political terrain intervening between the obscure, parentless boy of Cushing, Okla., and an appointment to West Point, to the end that before many weeks the new objective was reached and the appointment to the war college was received.

Itinerant Vendors Get Jolt in Atlantic City

Itinerant vendors who represent themselves as ex-service men are required at Atlantic City, N. J., to obtain the endorsement of the local post of the American Legion and to have been residents of the state for at least a year before permission is granted them to peddle their wares. County Clerk Blair, who advocated the ruling, stated: "There are Legion members and ex-service men enough who are entitled to anything in the way of permits to conduct business, without wasting time with fakers who are endeavoring to capitalize on sympathy for the former soldiers. Ex-service men have been victimized on all sides through the false representation of cheats who never were in the war and have no other concern than to make money at the veterans' expense."

May Prosecute Lawyers Charging for Service

Certain San Francisco lawyers who are alleged to have been charging fees for aiding former service men in making out their adjusted compensation blanks, are threatened with exposure by Maj. A. E. Graupner, chairman of the American Legion Rehabilitation Committee of California. Several complaints have come to the state department headquarters, according to Legion officials. Major Graupner has been authorized to protect the veterans' interests and to prosecute where sufficient evidence can be secured. The federal law prohibits the charging of fees for aiding ex-service men in filling out their adjusted compensation blanks.

Happiest Girl He Had Met

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

JOHN ALLEN, who declared he had no time to waste on women when there was so much to do in the world of engineering and forestry, in both of which he was especially interested, had called the new school teacher "The Hemlock Girl." Perhaps it was because he always met her on that mountain trail where the hemlocks closed in on either side.

She was the happiest girl he had ever met, and beyond the bare friendly nod of recognition that she would have given to Indian Joe she paid the handsome, bronzed young forester no attention.

So all through the beautiful autumnal weather the forester followed his regular trails over the mountaintop, storing his lookout house with supplies for the winter, providing himself with books and magazines for the long, snowed-in period ahead. On this particular morning the December sky was gray and heavy with snow. There was a light snow covering the ground now, and he would not be surprised if his homeward trip at night was accompanied by the howling of a wild snowstorm. There was a little eerie whine to the wind now with a rising note that warned him. He wondered if he had not better go back and warn the school teacher to dismiss her children early in the afternoon. But she was already out of sight.

"She looks like a sensible girl—probably's been warned about these mountain storms," he muttered, and then dismissed her loftily from his mind. The children had been granted a holiday because it was so near Christmas—and the Hemlock Girl had gone to the schoolhouse to decorate it for a Christmas party.

The snowstorm came, a blinding, swirling blizzard. How the wind did moan and screech! He bent to the blast, was swung off the trail and found himself floundering in a thicket of hemlock and spruce.

"Confound the hemlock!" he roared, and into his open mouth poured a flood of heavy flakes. A thin voice near by sang out mockingly: "Don't waste your powder, mister. Just—come—and—help—me!"

"Where?" bellowed John Allen lustily.

"Over here!" sang the voice, and they collided. Both churning in circles finally met and the smaller furry form went right into John's groping arms and nestled there.

"Where the dickens did you come from?" he wanted to know.

"School—snow—lost—way—cold—" And then the weight on his shoulder was heavier and he knew that the brave little girl of the hemlocks had fainted.

In a moment the forester was alert. He slung off the blanket roll he carried, put the blanket on the ground and laid her there. Then around her grouped the contents of his pack so that they would not be lost. His small bright lantern light showed a small hollow filling with snow. Beneath the snow would be pine needles. His arms worked like flails, and when he had scraped away the snow he took a poncho from the pack and fastened the corners to four small trees, making a light roof. His hatchet cut and slashed until he had great piles of hemlock and pine boughs with which he lined and walled the little shelter, and last of all he carried the blanket and its contents to the hut. Just at the opening in the shelter he scraped away a place and built a roaring fire. When he went to revive the Hemlock Girl she was sitting up, blinking lovely eyes at the grateful warmth and brightness.

"How wonderful it is—to come out of that terrible storm into this warmth and comfort. You are a perfect pioneer!" How lovely she looked there singing his praises and inciting him to new deeds of valor. In a minute she was beside him helping to make the house snug and tight, making coffee better than his own, sharing his cup and spoon, eating out of the same saucepan of thick tinned vegetable soup with lots of hard tack broken into it. For dessert he gave her some sweet chocolate, and through sharing the hardships and making this little shelter they became well acquainted enough to joke about the chocolate. When he had washed all the dishes with snow and everything was dried and packed tidily away, they sat and talked until all the fury of the blizzard seemed to have been expended. They knew each other like old friends.

"You cannot pass me by with that curt nod, Miss Gray, now that we are real—may I say friends?" he asked wistfully.

"Of course we are friends—and I do wish you would lend me some of the Digests you are always carrying to and fro; I am hungry for reading up here."

"All you want—didn't know you even noticed me," he stammered.

They both laughed from sheer lightheartedness, and soon after they heard the distant hail of the search party. Presently Alice was leaving, going down the mountain trail with Doctor Smith and his son, leaving John Allen alone standing beside the house they had built.

"What was the last thing she said? Cute, too! 'Please don't tear our house to pieces, Mr. Allen.' As if I ever would, bless her sweet eyes."

That was not the end—dear me, no—only the beginning.

OSTRICH IMPORTANT FEATURE; CLOTH FOR SCHOOL AND OFFICE

AUTUMN millinery makes its appeal for the picturesque through a lavish use of ostrich. Contributing to the importance of ostrich is the boa. Yes, that very same, the boa which years ago made lovely women look lovelier. This revival of the ostrich boa is like meeting a friend long since thought departed. Yet here it is, the feather boa, as charming and alluring as in the days of the sometime past.

"They say" that, while we are initiating the season with boas of ordinary length, later when the social season is on, bringing its occasion for extreme dressiness we may expect to see worn ostrich boas which reach almost to the ground. They are to be colorful, too, specializing two and three-tone effects, for so it is written in fashion's foreword.

MILLINERY FOR THE AUTUMN

Milliners are enthusiastically responding to the call of the mode, for a conspicuous use of ostrich. Exploitation of ostrich takes form in long graceful plumes which sweep their loveliness from crown of hat to shoulder depth. It is the gorgeous three-toned brown ostrich plume which gives an air of distinction and a portrait artistry to the little satin hat in this picture. An ostrich boa completes this handsome millinery ensemble.

The elegant model to the lower right of this trio of ostrich trimmed hats is fashioned of black velvet with a semi-facing of delicate pink. Long willow-tied flues of ostrich are knotted into an effective under-brim trim.

Between layers of malines are variegated wisps of ostrich placed in the chapeau illustrated to the lower left in the group. The crown is black velvet and the ostrich fringe ornament is in soft oriental colorings.

To be in fashion one must dress in cloth of quality kind this season, with charm enhanced by perfection and exquisite refinement of detail. Which decree of the mode coincides most accommodatingly with the requirements of business women, schoolgirls and all of the fair sex engaged in the pursuit of practical affairs.

Every foregathering of fall styles prominently features handsome cloth gowns which are a revelation of clever styling and of which the frock in the picture is a representative type. In the very simplicity of its detail, and the girlishness of its tailored linen collar and cuffs it seems to say "all ready for school." Just as admirably suited to office is it. In fact it is the type which makes appeal to every woman for daytime wear. One of the most fashionable cloths of the season is hair-line striped, and it is this material which lends itself so admirably to the making of this frock. Note the interesting yoke, the perky belt and buckle, the effective use of buttons at neck and across the pocket.

The straight, often beltless silhouette is the prevailing theme throughout the cloth dress collections now on display. Often these slenderizing models are developed in handsome soft flannels in very new colorings, russet being a favorite shade. It is predicted that dark brown and purple will court favor this season. Brick, rust and beige are also included in the list of popular colors, with a sustained interest manifest for black and white. Plaid flannels are one of the outstanding notes in fall fabric displays.

HANDSOME CLOTH GOWN

Cloth coat frocks are distinguished with novelty sleeves and original scarf effects. Typical of the mode is a navy charmeen street frock, and, by the way, charmeen is a very fashionable fabric. This handsome frock showed all the edges of the charmeen scalloped.

Bill's Record Is Marked 'Closed'

Former Tramp and Gambler Straightens Up and Has Made Good.

Detroit.—The life of social service workers often becomes monotonous with the never-ending round of unfortunates to be helped out of difficulty and disappointments from the many who seize the practical relief offered, but do not respond to constructive efforts to relieve the cause of the distress.

But the person who matches the help of the social worker with effort of his own to "come back" enheartens the worker and makes him feel his assistance has been worth while.

Rev. Oliver D. Smith of the social service department of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan is highly gratified over news just received that a man with whom he worked three years has at last found himself and is filling an important place in social and business life.

July 23, 1921, a man in the early "twenties" came into the office at 20 Woodbridge street west, in the old Mariner's church. His face showed dissipation, his clothing was soiled and ragged.

Turned Tramp.

"Bill," to call him by a name he had assumed, told a story of two years' overseas service in the army, of discontent and wanderlust that led him, as a tramp, over half of the United States. He was a college graduate, of an old southern family.

"Bill" became a gambler, associated with women of the street and used narcotics. He wanted to straighten out, he told Mr. Smith. A new outfit of clothing was provided and temporary work found for him in helping repair the second-hand clothing sent to the welfare office.

The man wanted a regular job, but none was available at that time. One day he called to say he had found work. He was dealing cards in a gambling dive. He bid Mr. Smith good-by and remarked that he would not be bothering him again.

Later, when newspapers carried the account of a police raid on the dive, Mr. Smith saw "Bill's" name among those arrested. Some months later "Bill" appeared again. But this time he had gone to work in an automobile factory and had saved $170. Remorseful again, he left Detroit for an upper peninsula town and obtained work in a steel mill.

When he next showed up in Detroit he had succeeded in staying sober and was well on the way to mastery over the drug habit. "Bill" told Mr. Smith of a girl in the South who had kept faith in him. He said he was going home to marry her and begin life anew.

Prosperous Now.

Recently "Bill" again called on Mr. Smith. Correctly dressed and well groomed, he looked the successful business man he had become. His card announced him the head of an oil producing company in Denver. Business had brought him to Cleveland, and he came to Detroit to tell Mr. Smith that it was the help and advice he gave, unmixed with pious platitudes, which enabled him to get a fresh start.

"I am going to send you a check for your work," he said as he left. "Use it on other fellows like me."

The girl who had waited is now "Bill's" wife.

"Bill's" file in the social record is marked "closed," but the latest "exhibit" in connection with the case is not included. This is a small snapshot of "Bill's" wife and baby. And Mr. Smith carries it in his pocket when he is not showing it to friends.

Tourists From America Kissing Blarney Stone

Blarney, Ireland.—Scores of Americans are being dangled daily by the heels over the parapet of the castle to kiss the Blarney stone.

Tourist traffic again is on an organized basis for the first time since the opening of the World war, and southern Ireland is much cheered by the arrival of visitors on every ship from America.

Early in June steamers in the transatlantic passenger traffic resumed stops at Queenstown, which is no longer Queenstown. That name was given to it after a visit of Queen Victoria, and with the revival of Irish independence the old Gaelic name of Cobh has been resumed by the Irish.

Historic Blarney castle suffered no damage in the struggles for Irish independence which followed the close of the World war.

Internal Heat of Earth Usable

Scientist Approves Suggestion of Boring a Hole Ten Miles Deep.

London.—Utilization of the internal heat of the earth as a source of power is worth undertaking as an international scientific enterprise, said E. W. Rice, Jr., honorary chairman of the board of directors of the General Electric company, at the recent meeting of the World Power conference in London.

"The source of power which we must expect from solar radiation is the power obtained from volcanic regions through holes bored into the earth, as has already been successfully developed in Italy," Mr. Rice said.

"Another possibility exists in the interesting and important suggestion made by Sir Charles Parsons in 1904, and again in 1919, of boring a great hole ten or twelve miles deep in some convenient and suitable place, to utilize the internal heat of the earth. This suggestion should not be allowed to lie fallow.

Cost Less Than Battleship.

"I heartily agree with Sir Charles in his statement that the cost of such an experiment is trivial compared with the value of the possible information which might be gained by the investigation into this unexplored region of the earth. The cost would be much less than that of a single battleship.

"If only the people and their representatives had the faith and vision of science the value of such an idea would have been put to practical use long ago. It is a big idea, worthy of a nation's enthusiastic support; in fact, it is worth undertaking as an international scientific enterprise—a suitable subject for co-operative work between friendly nations."

To use the internal heat of the earth for the production of power was only one of the suggestions offered by Mr. Rice in his talk on "New Fields of Research for Power Development." Mentioning the possibility of direct conversion of solar energy, the speaker suggested that the photoelectric process may contain the germ. The most promising solution, he considered, seems to be through storage in growing vegetation.

Storage Battery Advances Little.

Direct use of solar energy requires storage of the converted power. This emphasizes the fact that the storage battery, the only means for this, has advanced but little with the passing years. This is a problem for the chemist.

Despite the remarkable efficiency of the modern dynamo, and the great advances which have been accomplished with the turbine, there are still many ways in which they can be further improved. Better use of materials or the discovery of better materials to reduce weight and cost are possibilities in the case of the dynamo.

The use of mercury vapor, as carried on in the Emmet process, has greatly increased turbine efficiency, but mercury has its limitations and research should be continued for the discovery of another fluid which can be used similarly.

Study of overhead transmission should be continued along the lines which have yielded such a harvest—study of the limits of electric pressure, of corona losses, insulators, size and type of conductors, etc., Mr. Rice continued. High voltage transmission should also be investigated thoroughly, since at no distant time remotely situated water power must be utilized—the use of direct current, and the vacuum tube, command attention in this field.

More research and experimental work in connection with transmission of high voltages in underground cables is also imperative, since it is apparent that present design and manufacturing methods are not sufficiently advanced to produce 100,000-volt cable in commercial quantities at practical prices.

AUSTRALIA HAS SCHEME TO TREBLE POPULATION

Big Armies of British Workers and Other Desirable European Immigrants Are Sought.

London.—Australia is seeking suitable immigrants, and a scheme has been prepared to increase the population to 20,000,000, according to a statement issued by the department of labor and industry in Sydney, N. S. W. The population now is about 5,500,000.

The plan, devised by General Eames, is based on army methods, and will be brought before the Colonial institute for consideration. It is stated that big armies of British workers will be necessary to insure a British basis for the new settlement, and those modern conveniences of civilization which make for permanency must be provided.

To feed and clothe the newcomers during pioneering and at the same time teach them up-to-date methods of earning a livelihood from the soil will call for order and discipline, hence the proposed adoption of army methods.

The suggested conditions for settlers are: British origin or approved European nationality; voluntary agreement for three months as a pioneer worker; a deposit of $100 for six months' pay kept in hand; a basis of 48 hours' work a week; free transport, housing and feeding, care and instruction; hospital accommodation and medical attendance; pay of 75 cents per day of efficiency, deferred pay and, on completion of contract, a potential freehold, complete after three years' domicile as a citizen, with house and equipment in a closer settlement area and a bonus of $480.

At the same time the report of the oversea settlement delegation, appointed by the British government to secure information regarding the prospects of immigrants in Australia, expresses the opinion that the arrangements for the reception and care of immigrants constitutes a solid testimony of the states to shoulder their responsibilities and give the newcomer a fair start.

It is thought by members of the delegation that the nominating system is the safest that can be devised, and it was particularly impressed with the possibilities for the absorption of boys between sixteen and eighteen years of age. The delegation was also impressed with the extensive activities of the state governments in the development of land settlement schemes.

At a conference of state and federal immigration officers held in Melbourne to consider methods for the training of assisted immigrants, it was decided to recommend that, where the number of arriving immigrants warranted action, farm training depots should be established and the cost should be borne equally by the commonwealth and state governments. The length of training was to be left to the state authorities.

FIFTH AVENUE IS TOO EXCITING FOR MAN FROM THE WEST

Too Many Stick-Ups and "Doggone Many People," Says Guide.

New York.—Joe Jones, one of the best known guides in Wyoming, is counting the minutes until he can get back to the open spaces where men "don't ride like cattle in a cattle car." Joe sat in an office overlooking Fifth avenue and expressed himself in crash words like a pneumatic riveter in reverse.

"I've seen a man get off a hoss on the Injun side and break out in cold sweat," he said. "I've seen 'em run a hoss in a prairie dog town, and I've seen 'em pull going up a steep place and wondered when they were going to pitch backward. But I wouldn't live in New Yowk if you'd give me the whole city with a fence around it. I cain't sleep; I cain't eat. I keep my hand on my pocketbook in the subway. Good Jupiter! mister, you're liable to get stuck up any minute, and it's as much as a man's life is worth to cross Fifth avenue. Why, I've seen a driverless flivver, standing quietly at the curb, suddenly take after an innocent pedestrian and chase him all over the place.

Gosh! How He Dreads Trips.

So Joe is going back to Wyoming and he's counting the minutes. He came to New York on business and was appointed one of the official guides of the Buffalo Bill American association at 469 Fifth avenue, to conduct parties to Yellowstone park and to the site of the association's bronze equestrian statue of Buffalo Bill on the heights above the Shoshone river.

Chased Him All Over the Place.

New York is not new to Joe. He has been coming here at least once a year for twelve years. And, gosh, how he dreads it! Joe has a dude ranch out in Wyoming, fifty miles from Cody and twelve miles from the old T-E estates owned by Buffalo Bill. Wealthy New Yorkers visit the ranch each summer, up at the end of the wagon trail, to hunt bear, moose, elk, deer and big horn sheep in the hills of the Continental Divide. They get hardened, too.

Joe, who has spent most of his life in the saddle, says a saddle is far different from perching on the upholstery of a fine automobile, especially at the beginning. He says, too, that at the end of a forty-five-mile trip, somebody is likely to get careless and fall off a cliff, damaging the heads of the big game they're bringing back, to say nothing of themselves.

Too Doggone Many People.

Joe is keen-minded, but nature neglected him in stature. In fact, back in 1898, when he went to the Philippines with the First Idaho infantry, he was the smallest man in the army—five feet two inches, and weighing 118 pounds. His legs never will be straight.

But Joe was mournful now. He probably would have cried right into his strawberry ice cream soda if he had had one, but he was so nervous he didn't dare go out on the street. Joe is different at the summit of a mountain crag back home. He shook his head.

"Lemme get out where there ain't so doggone many people," he sighed. "Gimme my pack mules and saddle hosses. Gimme the altitude of the mountains and the camp fire, where man tells you his life history. Lord but I want to get back! I'd greaze my man's boots to be there."

Man Buried as Pauper Was Worth $100,000

Hutchinson, Kan.—Supposedly a pauper, J. Eggstein, who died at the poor farm and who is buried in the Potter's field, was worth more than $100,000, according to information reaching the county authorities here. A man who did not leave his name got affidavits of Eggstein's death from the superintendent of the poor farm, saying that the man had $21,000 in a Kansas City bank and $100,000 worth of bonds.

Eggstein was picked up on the street, supposedly a stranded harvest hand, last summer. He refused to give any information concerning himself, saying it was nobody's business.

BROUGHT HOME FROM MEXICO ON STRETCHER

But Mrs. Herman Is Now in Good Health, Thanks to Tanlac.

A few years ago Mrs. M. E. Herman, 215 Hitchings St., San Antonio, Texas, "returned to the states from Monterey, Mexico," she says, "in such a low state of health that she had to be carried to her home on a stretcher."

As time went on and she still lingered in the throes of "Nerve exhaustion, stomach disorders and bodily weakness," she determined, "on the advice of her druggist," to try Tanlac, which she declares "brought back my health and strength after I had almost despaired of ever getting well."

The results of Tanlac in the case of Mrs. Herman, while indeed remarkable, are by no means unusual for Tanlac, as many hundreds of people everywhere have testified to having taken the famous medicine with no less wonderful results.

"I returned from Mexico," said Mrs. Herman, "so thin and weak that I feared my life was going to be cut short. I could neither eat or sleep in a natural way and it seemed at times that heart palpitation and nerve exhaustion would take me away.

"The makers of Tanlac will always have my heartfelt thanks, for it is to Tanlac that I attribute my recovery and present good health. Tanlac is like a blessing from heaven to me, that is the way I think about it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 Million bottles sold.

Go From College to Marriage Altar

To judge from statistics compiled at Goucher college, marriage continues to be the most popular vocation among the students. Of nine different kinds of occupations in which 2,276 Goucher alumnae are engaged, 979, or about 40 per cent, are "married and are intelligent homemakers." More than 90 per cent, or 2,056, including the 979 married coeds, are listed as being engaged in "the duties of home and society."

The unmarried graduates are occupied as follows: 633 are teaching or are engaged in the work of educational administration; 172 are in business; 119 are in social work; 52 are in scientific work; 23 are physicians; 26 are librarians; 9 are doing statistical work; 42 are doing varied work, such as encouraging community music, sponsoring community dramatics and other activities.—Chicago News.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

"Come on, Peo-ple! Come on, and view the wonderful petrified man!" roared the barker outside of the tent which had been erected on a prominent corner in Wayoverbehind. "He was turned to stone while asleep, and remains in the same attitude and condition today!"

"I believe I'll go in and take a look at him," said Farmer Flintlock to his companion. "My hired man disappeared about ten days ago, and likely as not this is him."—Kansas City Star.

Don't chuckle if you put over a substitute when an advertised product is called for. Maybe your customer will never come back.

Odd Use for Auto Bodies

For temporary protection of a river bank being undermined by floods and strong currents, approximately 2,000 discarded automobile bodies were sunk in depths of from 20 to 40 feet. Placed in a barrier along the shore line, the cast-off vehicle hulks formed a "mattress" to hold the land from slipping into the stream. Many that did not readily submerge were filled with rock. It is said that the plan checked erosion of the bank, until permanent dikes could be installed.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

BASEBALL NOTES

Bellefonte Clinches Pennant in No Hit No Run Game.

Bellefonte, which has been leading in the pennant race in the county league, practically all summer, finally clinched the coveted honor in a beautifully played game with Millheim last Thursday. Hershberger, the youthful high school pitcher, shut out the opposition by pitching a no hit game. Millheim did not even get a man on first base. The final score was 2 to 0. Centre Hall put the skids under State College on Thursday, 6 to 3, which makes the race for last place rather close as will be shown in the averages below. On Saturday double headers were scheduled to be played by all the teams, but Millheim and State College could not play on account of muddy grounds. Bellefonte won one and lost one to Centre Hall. Score: first game, Bellefonte 14, Centre Hall, 3; second game, Centre Hall 6, Bellefonte 1.

	Won	Lost	Percentage
Bellefonte	21	6	778
Millheim	14	12	538
State College	9	17	346
Centre Hall	9	18	333

Schedule for this week: Thursday, Bellefonte at State College; Centre Hall at Millheim. Saturday, State College at Millheim; Centre Hall at Bellefonte (2 games.)

Upon his discharge from that institution he went to the home of his sister, Mrs. G. C. King, of Spring Mills. James says he had a very close call and it was only through the splendid work of Drs.
